A. C. Newman, Be Not So Fearful

Be not so nervous, be not so frail Someone watches you, you will not fail Be not so nervous, be not so frail Be not so nervous, be not so frail

Be not so sorry for what you've done You must forget them now, it's done And when you wake up you will find you can run Be not so sorry for what you've done

Be not so fearful, be not so pale Someone watches you, you will not leave the rails Be not so fearful, be not so pale Be not so fearful, be not so pale

Be not so sorry for what you've done You must forget them now, it's done And when you wake up you will find you can run Be not so sorry for what you've done
