

Aardvarks, Grey

Everything I see is coloured grey that's no recognition in dismay every system has its second sight indefinable the ruling might Talking black and white to lay down what is wrong and right tell the lie of good and evil narrow minded view

the source of all religious stew cause everything I see it's all just shades of grey

Trying to escape into belief disappointment's all you will receive leaving judgement to a greater power a sight that evolution will devour Painting black and white declaring what is wrong or right tell the tale of good and evil small-minded point of view the source of all the ritual stew

cause everything I see
it's all just shades of grey

Fear of total death haunting your mind hoping your eternal life to find searching for redemption is your aim deciding others fate for you the same

Thinking black and white to write down what is wrong and right
tell the lie of good and evil
narrow minded view
the base of all the ritual stew
cause everything I see
it's all just shades of grey