Afroman, Kentucky

The night before your wedding I dreamed what I would say I beg you for forgiveness for all the mess I made I dreamed that you were gracious, I dreamed you wished me well I dreamed that you were vicious, you damned me straight to hell But oh sweet Kentucky No matter where I land I was just a boy for you And he will be your man And I was just a boy for you And he will be your man I'd tell you that I'm lonely and fame has let me down Living like a stranger, traveling town to town And all my aspirations don't amount to much

The wine and the women are such a shameful crutch But oh sweet Kentucky
No matter where I land
Cause I was just a boy for you
And he will be your man
And I was just a boy for you
And he will be your man
I know you will be happy and I'll be in the band
Cause I was just a boy for you
And he will be your man
And I was just a boy for you
