After Edmund, Everyone

Sometimes you trip and fall Build a mountain on something small And you know you can't catch your fall this time Deep down beneath your bones Doe's your heart beat Is it made of stone You can't ignore what you feel inside Everyone you don't have to run You don't have to find escape and wait for kingdom come You don't have to run No need to hide from grace Just let love take you away When life's a Broadway show With your best friends on the front row Do you realize we've all read the lines Stretched thin out in the cold But love can melt your paper soul You know we can't make it on our own
