Anders Holst, Fight The Tide

Started with a smile Hopin? dreamin?

Thought I saw you for a while

By the door

When you walked right in Across the crowded floor

Winter turned into a summer breeze

A hint of what could happen to me?

Life became alive

Hopin? dreamin?

You looked straight into my eyes

When you asked dead calm

Who I was hiding from?

I was stunned beyond belief

I was so lonely then, in some kind of grief

You broke your way into my heart

Your honesty, spoke to me

Sunday school and church on time

Backyards filled with neighbors and wine

Kids on the screen from days gone by

Soccer mom dance through the nights of July

When you feel it might be over

Slipping through your hands

You just look behind your shoulder

Turning back the time

You know love is like a rover

Moving like a wave

Love remains, inside your veins, you can?t fight the tide

You can?t fight the tide

We were all so young

Hopin? dreamin?

Never thought the day would come

When life stood still, against our will

Frozen in time

Work all day from nine to five

Long for the weekends, to keep things alive

Listen to the voices deep inside

Even a lonely heart?s got something to hide