Art Brut, Am I Normal?

I can't take a broken heart

So this'll be another false start I knew where you lived

So when I used to walked home from school

I used to go especially slow past your house

In case your bus would stop and you would get off and we could start chatting or something

But the one time that did happen I got scared and hid behind a tree

Deep breath, stay calm

Try and hide those sweaty palms

I can't get no satisfaction

I've got an itch I can't stop scratching

Another time I'd overheard you saying you were going into town

And at the time I lived right in between two towns, but I wasn't quite sure which one you meant

So I bought a bus pass, I went to both of them, and frantically looked for you everywhere

And when I finally saw you at WH Smith's, I got scared

Deep breath, stay calm

Try and hide those sweaty palms

I can't get no satisfaction

I've got an itch I can't stop scratching

I can't take another false start

So this'll be a broken heart

I can't take a broken heart

So this'll be just another false start

And then the last time this happened, we were drinking down some woods

And then the drink gave me courage, it was cider, it was cheap at the time

And um, I saw you standing over there with your friends

And I knew this time had to be the time

So I boldly start walking towards you

Deep breath, stay calm

Try and hide those sweaty palms

I can't get no satisfaction

I've got an itch that I can't stop scratching

I can't take another false start

So this'll be a broken heart

I can't take a broken heart

So this'll just be another false start

I've lost the ability to speak;

Uhn da da da da da