

Ashley Monroe, Used

Used Like an old piano played for generations slowly fading out of tune, (Used like the soul's on the
I know I'm not some bright and shiny polished up car that's sparkling new right off the salesroom floor
Yeah I've got some dents and bruises I've been dropped and there's a scar where my heart has been

Used

Used, like a book read so many times front to back it starts to split in two,

Used like a house where a family lived till they died and there's a soul in every room

I know I'm not some brand new new dress hanging there perfectly pressed, that never has been worn

Used

This fragile heart has been passed around been ignored and been let down, been learning since then

But everything it's been through has lead me down to this road to and I can give like I couldn't give
