

Blink-182, The Girl Next Door

White girl living in the city
In a big apartment house
She's living with her boyfriend now

She drives off every day for school and work
She washes dishes now
And watches tv on the pull out couch

but every day's the same
And every day's the same

White girl moved back to the suburbs
And she finally found a man
Who knows how to take care of her they bought the perfect little house

And the lawn's well manicured
And she's never missed a day of work

And every day's the same

White girl couldn't go on knowing
She was just here wasting her time
She drowned in the lake last night

They found her bloated body floating
But she still walks around
Performing all her daily chores

She still don't know what life's about
She still don't know what life's about
Cause every day's the same
and every day's the same
