Bon Jovi, Fallen From Graceland

R.sambora

There's a line that you cross When you find out that you're lost When your world is closing in And it crawls under your skin And the heart's always blind When it's in this state of mind There's a burning light in this town For every heart that's broken down tonight Here tonight You're stranded out there in the rain And you just can't see past the pain tonight You've fallen from graceland Fallen from graceland When you're too proud to crawl It keeps you back against the wall You wanna die, but you live With nothing left to give And there's no place to hide When you're tangled up inside There's a burning light in this town For every heart that's broken down tonight Here tonight You're stranded out there in the rain

But you just can't see past the pain tonight You've fallen from graceland And there's no place to hide When you're tangled up inside There's a burning light in this town For every heart that's broken down tonight Here tonight You've stranded out there in the rain But you just can't see past the pain tonight You've fallen from graceland Fallen you've fallen from graceland tonight Fallen, fallen, fallen from graceland And tonight There's a light A bright light burning For every broken heart in this world tonight Deep inside Yes, there's one light burning That will lead you throught the storm tonight It's gonna be alright Be alright, yeah Gonna be alright, yeah It's gonna be alright (oh, it's gonna be alright, tonight)