CHVRCHES, My Enemy (ft. Matt Berninger)

I got no more time to hear you think about me because all your words are so cold, so callous, so clean in the moment you could be honest you could wake up, up but your jealously's mere blind than love and you could be my enemy and you could be my judge if you could start remembering all the time that you used up and you could be my remedy if you could show me love if you could stop remembering all the time that you used up

I got more time to hear who you think you should blame because all your words are so vile so vicious, so vain in the end we did all the demage you could wanr, want but your emptiness will go on and on

and you could be my enemy and you could be my judge if you could start remembering all the time that you used up and you could be my remedy if you could show me love if you could stop remembering all the time that you used up

and you could be my enemy and you could be my judge if you could start remembering all the time that you used up and you could be my remedy if you could show me love if you could stop remembering all the time that you used up