Deep Purple, A Twist In The Tale

As you watch from your house on the hill World keeps spinning around you you're standing still And a thought rivers enters your mind Something happened once in my life A fading picture of you that's so hard to describe I've been where the sun never shines

That's alright there's a change in the story That's alright there's a change in the plan A twist in the tale

Face in the mirror head in the clouds
Hanging on to a dream that you can't do without
As it drops like a stone without trace
Give what you want take what you need
Squeezing so hard there's no room to breathe
And your flavour has fallen from grace

That's alright there's a change in the story That's alright there's a change in the plan A twist in the tale

I saw you dancing Dancing on air You were lost in the in the starlight No one but me really cared

Every question turns out a lie Can't you swallow the truth for once in your life I loved you but don't ask me why

It's alright there's a change in the story It's alright there's a change in the plan A twist in the tale