Delain, Tell Me, Mechanist

Tell me, Mechanist, is it true? Does none of it bother you?

Once upon a time
Upon a time behind us
The mechanist inclined
Clockworks of time define us
Who you are, who you are
Merely springs that tick
The time of things away

The cry from the beast is just the noise Of a spring that you have touched Not a human: not a voice

If only we could go back to the start (Tell me, mechanist, is it true?) We would see we're not that far apart (Does none of it bother you?) And realize the likeness of our hearts If we could go back, we could go back

One and the same Likely to one another But the mechanist inclined Merely our kind can suffer Who you are, who you are Does it justify Pleasing your palate With the other's blood?

Tell me why, have the writings on the wall Nor the dawn of DNA Changed a single thing at all?

If only we could go back to the start (Tell me, mechanist, is it true?)
We would see we're not that far apart (Does none of it bother you?)
And realize the likeness of our hearts
If we could go back, we could go back to the start

Closing Collision:
The end of our divide
Savor the flavor
Of our ancestry rites
Closing Collision:
We'll realize in time
No opposition
We're genetically entwined

Tell me, Mechanist, is it true? Does none of it bother you?

We could go back to the start (Tell me, mechanist, is it true?)
We would see we're not that far apart (Does none of it bother you?)
And realize the likeness of our hearts
If we could go back, we could go back to the start
