Dolly Parton, The Little Things

(Dolly Parton)

You never send me flowers
Or ever buy me candy
You never bring me pretty things
When you come to see me
And you forgot my birthday
Oh I wish you could see
How I miss
The little things
That you don't do for me

You never say that I look nice Or that you're proud of me You overlook The little things That you should see

These little things are big enough to hurt But too small to make me want to leave But I do miss The little things That you don't do for me

Now how can I miss flowers That never reach my door How can I taste candy That's still at the candy store

These little things mean a lot to me To you they may be silly But I do miss The little things That you don't do for me Yes I miss The little things That you don't do for me
