Eric Clapton, Innocent Times

(Eric Clapton and Marcy Levy)

I was a child born so free; It seems that time has put age on me. And when I grow old, will I once again find All of those sweet, innocent times?

I was a child born without fear; It seems that time has placed me here. With no freedom to laugh, there's more reason to cry. I really miss those innocent times.

I used to feel joy in my soul, But now my sorrow has taken control. As I look around I pray, Lord be kind; Just one more taste of those innocent times.

As I look around I pray, Lord be kind; Just one more taste of those innocent times, Just one more taste of those innocent times.
