

Flume, Some Minds

In our home all day I waited for the change

Something warm that I could say

Somehow I don't care

Though I love the clothes she wears

And I love her body bare

So I pray that it won't feel the same

Don't think that I can't see it in your eyes

Darling yeah we both knew it from the start

Some minds are better kept apart.

Here I pass the day in a most peculiar way

Watching ships out on the bay

And I swallow so hard

Am I too weak to fight

As the day becomes the night and I don't want to be right

So I pray that it won't feel the same

Don't think that I can't see it in your eyes

Darling yeah we both knew it from the start

Some minds are better kept apart.
