Frank Duval, Give Me Your Love

Something strange was in the air when I woke up last night. A special formed light and a far away voice was talking to me: Give me your love try to believe in feelings. Give me your love try to believe in me. Give me your love time has a special value

A moment of love that's eternity.

Give me your love you'll find a door of glass and light

You'll open it you'll leave the night you'll never feel alone. Give me your love that's the sign for you to rise

Into a new dimension of life give me your love.
The woice strange and light faded away when dawn came And left me behind with these words in the air:

Give me your love you'll find a door of glass and light

. . .