

Funker Vogt, Under Control

They are watching you from far away everything is under their control you can run but you can't hide in this very little world so you better leave this place looking for a better world without watchers in the night where you can live in peace every little step you take every little move you make they're watching you they're watching you without respect for your life

Everywhere are microphones they listen all day and night to every tiny word you speak in your very little world so you better speak a word keep the silence in your heart no more shouting anywhere until they leave you

every little step you take
every little move you make
they're watching you they're watching you
without respect for your life