Gary Allan, Forgotten, But Not Gone

Her birthday came and went without a card, Or a single I love you On their anniversary she sat all alone At a table set for two She tries her best to please him, But she never hears one single word of praise She feels just like a stranger, In a home where love has seen its better days

Well he's takin' her for granted God only knows why she keeps hangin' on 'Cause it's better to be gone, but not forgotten Than to be forgotten, but not gone

Somehow he can't remember,
When he's late to even take time to call
And even on the nights he's there
She gets the feeling he's not there at all
She's become a prisoner in that big old house
Where sweet love used to be
Well, it's not even over
But Lord, she feels just like a memory

Well he's takin' her for granted God only knows why she keeps hangin' on 'Cause it's better to be gone, but not forgotten Than to be forgotten, but not gone

'Cause it's better to be gone, But not forgotten, gone but not forgotten Than to be forgotten, but not gone...
