Godhead, Another Day

I don't want to be a part of the same mistake I'll stick around, hold the ground you surround As my bones will break I don't want to touch any living part of you I'll keep away every day you display your ineptitude

Another day in the light Another ocean of spite Another way I can say, Everything is alright

I'm tired of sharing your shallow existence What in the hell did you think I would do? I know you never expected resistance Now you'll just have to find somebody new

Another day in the light Another ocean of spite Another way I can say, Everything is alright

Another day in the hole Another weight on my soul Another way I can see the light growing old Here I am playing the role The tension taking it's toll Another way I can see my life being sold

Another day in the light Another ocean of spite Another way I can say, Everything is alright