

Hear The Sirens, Fuck It, Let's Play!

This is a sign of hope, a hand to hold;
these dying slurs will be silenced with truth.
The speechless will speak with no remorse,
screaming for life: this is what we live for.
So look at us know, I know you're not happy;
I know you're not proud but we're here to say:
we're in this together, we'll do it our own way.
I can't believe every word I hear;
it all stops now and we start here.
My thoughts dwell on your face that day;
those hateful eyes, you're not ok!
So look at us know, I know you're not happy;
I know you're not proud but we're here to say:
we're in this together, we'll do it our own way.
Don't take back a single word;
I'll take it all in, another lesson learned.
Walk hand and hand through tick and thin,
where some see an ending, it's where we begin.
Open your eyes and what will we see?
Everything in between.
Open your eyes and what will we see?
These new beginnings.
So look at us know, I know you're not happy;
I know you're not proud but we're here to say:
we're in this together, we'll do it our own way.