Janis Joplin, The Peoples Song

My hands are tied behing my back my face is red with hate I know i've tried to be the better man but I can't accept this fate It's seems every time I cross the line and wonder that Am supposed to figure which way you want to go And I can see that misery is plaguing you And i'm supposed to be there when you have no one Take my hand i'll take from where you stand My mind is made up and I can't take the people falling Down on me but that's the way it's gotta be (our 2 worlds can't coexist) I can't promote a lie that I wanna watch you crying My hands are tied behing my back my face is red with hate I know i've tried to be the better man but I can't accept this fate It's seems every time I cross the line and wonder that Am supposed to figure which way you want to go And I can see that misery is plaguing you And i'm supposed to be there when you have no one Take my hand i'll take from where you stand My mind is made up and I can't take the people falling Down on me but that's the way it's gotta be (our 2 worlds can't coexist) I can't promote a lie that I wanna watch you crying
