JESS GLYNNE, No One

Swimming in the deep end
With nowhere to go
My body's on the journey
And my mind can't let go I'm falling into nothing Tell me what's left to lose Fore I knew where I was going And now I know I need you they say you're no one until you're somebody to someone they say you're no one till someone misses you when you're gone and now I feel like I've let you down it's me now who's reaching now I can't do this on my own because you're no one until you're somebody to someone when I hit the ground running trying not to give in every step is a hurtle don't know where I begin hold my mind wide open when lonely is the truth thought I knew where I was going and now I know I need you

if I came home all back down of I have no one else around would you be there to pull me up will I be that somebody to you? please tell me, please tell me now would you be there to pull me up please tell me, please tell me now could I be that somebody to you? to you, to you, to you could I be that somebody to you?
