

Josh Groban, River

some days I can't say why I'm feeling lonely and some days I'm too proud to ask for help and I stumble through the noise trying to find some peace a stranger in the crowd, I lose myself so I walk down to the river where the trouble

they can't find me
let the waters there remind me the sun will be there when we wake
I walk down to the river it's not always as we planned it but we grow stronger when we break
so I walk down to the river

this raging world can get so overwhelming looking for a meaning when it won't make sense in my head it's getting loud like I can't outrun this cloud no matter where I go well there I am

so I walk down to the river
where the trouble
let the waters there remind me
so I walk down to the river

let the calm pull me under far beyond the thunder and tell me it will all be ok. let the waves take all my worries conquer them with fury give me shelter be my escape

where the trouble
let the waters there remind me
the sun will be there when we wake
so I walk down to the river
I walk down to the river
I walk down to the river
where the trouble
so I walk down to the river
I walk down to the river
I walk down to the river
I walk down to the river
to the river
