

Kari Amirian, A Little B.

She walked a foot above the ground
Seldom stuck her head out of the clouds
Dreaming life while awake

She'd drift away and talk to stars
Give answers after count to five
And dance her longing away

She played a princess when nobody saw
But nobody knew that she was Truly one

Her heart was like a little bee
Fragile, full of joy and honeysweet
Yet still ready to fight

Her shadow was her only foe
As she worried it might grow some more
When she turns down the light

She played a princess when nobody saw
Wearing diamond tiara with sneaker of gold
And nobody knew that when she didn't play
Still she was a princess
A pearl of the king

Round and round there she goes
Where she stops - no one knows
Round and round there she goes
When she stops - no one knows
