

Kate Bush, Love & Anger

it lay buried here
it lay deep inside me it's so deep I don't think that I can speak about it it could take me all my life but it would only take a moment to tell you what I'm feeling but I don't know if I'm ready yet you come waltzing into this room like you're walking into my arms what would I do without you?

CHORUS

take away the love and the anger and the little piece of hope holding us together looking for a moment that'll never happen living in the gap between past and future take away the stone and the timber and a little piece of rope won't hold it together if you can't tell your sister if you can't tell a priest cause it's so deep you don't think that you can speak about it to anyone can you tell it to your heart? can you find it in your heart to let go of these feelings like a bell to a southerly wind we could be like two strings beating speaking in sympathy

what would we do without you?
two strings speak in sympathy

you might not think so now but just you wait and see (someone will come to help you)
