

Lana Del Rey, Big Eyes

With your big eyes
And your big lies
With your big eyes
And your big lies

I saw you creeping 'round the garden,
What are you hiding?
I beg your pardon, don't tell me nothing
I used to think that I could trust you
I was your woman,
You were my knight in shining companion
To my surprise, my love still mine's Horses on breed, and lullabies

With your big eyes
And your big lies
With your big eyes
And your big lies

I noticed you got out in summer,
You had comfort, your shade was gone
Your face was sun bright
You paced around like you've been waiting,
Waiting for something, your world was burning
And I stood watching
As I looked on, the flames grew high
You watched me from, I said goodbye

With your big eyes
And your big lies
With your big eyes
And your big lies

Is it me? was I wrong to have trusted you?
Did I see what I wanted? what wasn't true?
Was I wrong to go on like a little fool?
It's amazing what women in love will do

With your big eyes
And your big lies
With your big eyes
And your big lies
