

Machinae Supremacy, Deus Ex Machinae

Come summon all your deities they stand on trial before a tribunal of humankind
We are but children to the earth
No matter what they say we owe it all to her

she is beautiful
our fading world tonight

History bleeds for tomorrow for us to realize and never more follow blind We offer conscious rebirth there is no other way
we owe it all to her

she is beautiful
our fading world tonight

Somewhere close but far away (the light) where we are all forever
All of those who long to stay (the light) will tear apart and sever

It's time to carry the burden to rise above all dreams of aliens and gods
We are but children to the earth
No matter how you pray
we owe it all to her

so beautiful our dying world tonight

Somewhere close but far away, the light, obscured in disarray A withered rose that sprung and fades tonight, watching as they sway...

you know it's now or never.