

Madness, Sarah's Song

(Thomson/Barson/Barson)

Welcome home
Seems as if it were yesterday since you were gone
Now sit yourself and let me witness what's become
Of the smiles that you brought, and placed upon
But there is nothing that I could or would have done

Oh, the look in your eyes as they dragged you from
The clutches of my breaking heart
Our hope's true that could put us drawn
The time has stood still until now

Although it was unfair
You're back in my arms again, now
Although the memory's bare
We can rebuild all our hopes again

Please understand
That you were like an angel growing in my hands
By circumstances change as to their demands
And I thought that love would have coped but in the end
Oh there was only ugly scenes and wrecked romance

And the look in your eyes as they dragged you from
The clutches of my breaking heart, now

Although it was unfair
You're back in my arms again, now
Although the memory's bare
We can rebuild all our hopes again

The clutches of my bricking heart and happy home

The time has stood still until now
Oh yes it was unfair
But now
You're back in my arms again
Now (Although it's unfair)
Although it was unfair you're back in my arms again
Now
Although the memory's bare we can rebuild all our hopes again
Now
Although it was unfair you're back in my arms again
Now