

Magnum, Let Somebody In

When did you stop looking homeward?
Deep in trouble, endlessly
Just like a ghost across the water
You disappear quietly
Now everyday seems too long
And everything just goes wrong
So when did you start to live again?
What a way for this to end

You'd better let somebody in - you don't open up to anything
You'd better let somebody in - the times growing shorter
Let somebody in - you're going to lose it all again
You'd better let somebody in - before you're blood turns to water

Now you get lost in your own time
Hide your secrets far away
Don't count the cost when you're falling
Don't have the answers so you say
When everybody brings you down
You're just a face in the crowd
'Cause you don't try, you don't pretend
What a way for this to end

You'd better let somebody in - you don't open up to anything
You'd better let somebody in - the times growing shorter
Let somebody in - you're going to lose it all again
You'd better let somebody in - before you're blood turns to water

I thought that I really knew you
But that can't be right
And no one could ever find you
Lost in the night

You'd better let somebody in - you don't open up to anything
You'd better let somebody in - the times growing shorter
Let somebody in - you're going to lose it all again
You'd better let somebody in - before you're blood turns to water
