Magnum, The Flood (Red Clouds War)

They were just thieves and robbers You were a stepping-stone Look how the innocent suffer Raging like a storm in you soul One thing they forgot to mention Making peace was their last intention

There was a time you trusted You were too proud to beg Now you just feel disgusted With everything you've done and said There wasn't really time to cry Or even kiss the children goodbye

You got swept by the flood, you got talked out of dreams There was a price on your blood, couldn't wash yourself clean It wasn't really worth a whole lot, looking back at what you got Like words in the mud, tears in a stream, no more dreams

All that you ever wanted All that you'd seen and heard Never got really started Like a river never turned They didn't give a reason why Never even bothered to try

You got swept by the flood, you got talked out of dreams There was a price on your blood, couldn't wash yourself clean It wasn't really worth a whole lot, looking back at what you got Like words in the mud, tears in a stream, no more dreams

Killers without a conscience
Only the good lie dead
Great father who trades in nonsense
Picture this inside your head
The magic of the talking wires
Carry both the truth and the lies

You got swept by the flood, you got talked out of dreams There was a price on your blood, couldn't wash yourself clean It wasn't really worth a whole lot, looking back at what you got Like words in the mud, tears in a stream, no more dreams
