

Mandy Moore, Creative Individual

A creative individual is seeking normalcy

The embarrassment and humiliation with every mocking word is almost too much for her to bare

The unsettling cruelty is easy to see through their actions

The uncomfortable image of them is obvious when you look in to their eyes

A creative individual is seeking normalcy

As they have everything that they could ever want yet they ask for more

While she has nothing and gives everything

Their selfish pride is nothing compared to her unarming humility that they will never see and she will

A creative individual is seeking normalcy

She tries her best to fit in but it never seems to be enough

Will she ever be good enough to fit in with the cool crowd is the question that replays in her head

To her the word cool means a dream that will never come true

And popularity is as distant as the farthest planet

A creative individual is seeking normalcy

While realizing that it's okay to not fit in

For in her mind nobody fits in

Nobody is perfect and neither is she

No matter how many times she gets stomped on or how many hurtful words are spat at her it doesn't

A creative individual is no longer seeking normalcy

As she has finally come to terms that it's okay to be comfortable with your self no matter the verdict

No matter what happens to you'll turn out great as long as you're strong enough to say the one thing

They openly mock you for being different but you silently laugh at them for all being the same