Maria Taylor, One Of The Shareholder

A dance, a bid, a matinee
It's a faint, a brief, affinity
It's a touch, when it shouldn't be
But it's all right
And it's a step but you're too quick to fall
Now a crash but it's just physical
Not a point, 'cept it's natural
But it's all right

Uh-uh

There's no burden that will agonize you A worry that will weigh you down Not the memories that hypnotize you You won't turn around

You can't love me (x4)

A regret, it's undetectable It's a shy display, nonemotional It's a siren, barely audible But it's all right

And it's an angle of the paradigm It's a cold box of cheap red wine It's the thought that gets lost in time But it's all right

Uh-uh

There's no burden that will agonize you A worry that will weigh you down Not the memories that hypnotize you You won't turn around

You can't love me (x4)

It's a shade of what it could not be (x3) It's a shade, a shade

There's no burden that will agonize you A worry that will weigh you down Not the memories that hypnotize you You won't turn around

You can't love me (x4)
