

No Use For A Name, Alone

Life must be empty when living a lie
With something to hide and nothing to show
You have learned nothing but how to destroy
Things that friends who love you couldn't leave alone

Someday it's gonna hit you between the eyes
That we're not sixteen years old anymore
One day those people that used to welcome you with open arms
Will see you coming and hide, then lock the door

People that listend to you were afraid
Even friends that knew you as a kid
Now you are sorry, but you'll never change
Change the things that you already did

Someday it's gonna hit you between the eyes
That the seeds have already been sown
Find your own garden, because you still need space to grow
Until that time, you will remain alone

Don't try to come around with your pathetic lies, 'cause I can see it in your Eyes that you will always be the same and you will never change the past
That you have brought among yourself, and this is why we have to say
Goodbye, it's time for truth and not for lies...that you have always told
Your trust was bought and sold, you're all alone