

Outspoken, Revolving

Deeply I scream from within
That I surrender cause I've been searching
For a clue that I'm alive
I'm like a goldfish swimming in a plugged in blender
The water's peaceful with a view from the inside
But somebody must've already broken my wings
'Cause I couldn't fly, not to mention how this broken down machine pretends to try

If I was the sun
And you were the mother earth
I'd still revolve around you

You print the label that turns me outside-in So peel it off, or get within
In you there's always a someday,
With that there's nothing I fear,
But what if there's never a someday at all
But sometimes I wish the world would stop
And let me off for just awhile, just sometime
To retreat from my losses so I can smile

If I was the sun
And you were the mother earth
I'd still revolve around you

Why is it so surprising, no one's compromising
If we're all born dying, can't we just start trying To build a life worthin living, if you're Tired of giving, lend the tools to rebuild my life

If I was the sun
And you were the mother earth
I'd still revolve around you

If I was the sun
And you were the mother earth
I'd still revolve around you

Revolve around you
