

Paleo, When Pirates Come To Port

WHEN PIRATES COME TO PORT

sigh

a boy can change your life a girl can feel so right like lilies late at night one million snow white christs see the pirates come to port to trade their hooks for hands with somber gentle eyes they swap the sea for land

a waltz on wooden shoes on water to the blues no reason to survive except perhaps for you light sleeping sun gods reborn at sea we go toothless seeking love underneath those pillows heavy breathers have hard times recalling a dream of live wires, heavy metal weights, and a man in deep water

a reason to survive for pirates come to port we have always had the key we just never found the door
