He wrote me one day four six and four nine

I stared at it long, even doubt in my sight Next day little digits where just when I left them Shimmering lightly and shining a bit Zero eight four and a zero an odd way for hello I got used to it quickly and my own words forgot

We talked for a month or so I got lost with the time and thought about it no more When he asked me one day Just completely by chance Tell me how do you feel Point five nine Point five nine Were the best words to sound
