Persons Missing, Windows

Something feels so strange tonight It's not wrong but it's just not right Some hidden complications fill me with hesitation And it gets so dark in here I can't see through doubts and fears Walled in by expectation I need a deviation a change in perspective alternative view to help me see clearly- observe something new

All i want is a window to look through All i need is a window to look through It's the only thing that i wanna do anyway

All i want is a window to look through All i need is a window to look through It's the only thing that i really wanna do anyway

Outside the world is dangerous it's hard to find someone to trust Fills me with reservation Drives me into hibernation I watch what's going on but i don't want to belong leave my my introspection safely behind protection

All i want is a window to look through All i need is a window to look through It's the only thing that i wanna do anyway

All i want is a window to look through All i need is a window to look through It's the only thing that i really wanna do anyway

Looking through windows at the world Looking through windows at the world Safe behind windows from the world Safe behind windows from the world Watching my window world go by Watching my window world go by Without my window who am i? Without my window who am i?

All i want is a window to look through All i need is a window to look through It's the only thing that i wanna do anyway
