

Phantom Planet, 8

She cried so loud today
Her neighbors all complain
'Someone please send this girl away'
We've said goodbye before a million times or more
This time she shut the door

I won't see her again
It hasn't sunken in
It just brings me down to know
That she could be so happy on her own

I hear she's doing fine
See her out once or twice
Reach out my arms to catch her eye
Sometimes I try to find some kind of reason why

I won't see her again
It hasn't sunken in
It just brings me down to know
That she could be so happy on her own

'Be good' were her last words
And I'm sure that I heard her shoes walk away on the curb
She cried so loud tonight
And all the reason why
I got the chance to say goodbye

I won't see her again
It hasn't sunken in
It just brings me down to know
That she could be so happy on her own
Just brings me down to know
That she could be so happy on her own
Just brings me down to know
That she could be so happy on her own
