Placebo, Smile With Jane Birkin

Don't stare at your face with your nose out of place At the wrinkles where zits used to be And remember that smiling uses less muscles And frowning just makes you look ugly So smile, smile

And the whole world will smile with you

So smile, Baby, smile

If the whole world just had a clue

Don't mess with your man when he's selling you grams

He would kill you for less and then smile

And don't curse at a whore as you open the door

Cos' your service wont be with a smile

So smile, smile

And the whole world smiles with you

And smile, Baby, smile

If the whole world just had a clue

Don't sneer at your doctor or Gamble and proctor

Cos' they're just pawns in the game

The perfect prescription is one that you're given

It's filled out in Jesus' name

Don't be scared of your preacher cos' hes just a leech

He's too busy cruising your ass

There's a verse in the Bible

That says we're all liable

For everything that comes to pass

So smile, smile

And the whole world smiles with you

So smile, Baby, smile

If the whole world just had a clue

So smile, smile

Smile, smile

Smile, smile
