Propagandhi, Today's Empires, Tomorrow's Ashe

This tangled web we weave spans from Pine to Ruby Ridge Back to Shay's defeat On up to Gufstafsen Now cue the ass parade of dittoheads and commisars and pricks Drown out the faintest hint of commie faggot heretics

The nail that sticks up gets hammered down The master's finest tools are found Slack-jawed and placid Amidst the cacophony Of screaming billboards and Disney-fied history

Sometimes the ties that bind are strange No justice shines upon the cemetary plots marked Hampton, Weaver, or Anna Mae Where federal bureas and fraternal orders Have cast their shadows Permanent features build into these borders

But undercover of the The customary gap we find between History and truth Founding fathers Bask in the rockets blinding red glare Bombs bursting in air

But the truth is
The back country learned of ratification
The people had a coffen painted black
And solemnly born in funeral procession
They buried it deep in the earth
An an emblem of their disillusion
Internment of their public liberty
Someday, somewhere
Today's empires, tomorrow's ashes
