

Real Friends, Keep It Together

You'll spend every Saturday night on the bathroom floor
With no recollection of the night before You're a trainwreck and everything that's in between Being alone doesn't seem so bad to me

You're the type of girl that let's this whole town know When your lips come anywhere near a bottle And all you want is the attention from every eye and ear that covers up the walls in this room

I'd rather sleep with just my boney knees
And the thought of someone that stands up straight
I guess I'll sleep alone tonight
You'll tell everyone you're different But you're just a shade of grey that never stuck out to anybody

Fast forward to 2 A.M. and the walls aren't spinning around enough for you to forget your ex-boyfriend and all of your shitty friends You say you'll keep it together but I know you're gonna make those walls fall down they always do

I'd rather sleep with just my boney knees
And the thought of someone that stands up straight
I guess I'll sleep alone tonight
You'll tell everyone you're different
But you're just a shade of grey
that never stuck out to anybody

I'd rather sleep with just my boney knees
And the thought of someone that stands up straight
I guess I'll sleep alone!

I'd rather sleep with just my boney knees
And the thought of someone that stands up straight
I guess I'll sleep alone tonight
You'll tell everyone you're different
But you're just a shade of grey
that never stuck out to anybody