Royal Hunt, Exit Wound

It's been around for a while... that sign of a new beginning I tried to let it all slide - no way, my mind keeps spinning Some of the choices I've made's been haunting me forever as trying hard to persuade me to regret. However:

Loneliness is grieving over what you are and then discover who you were... or used to be... and now it seems so hard to understand Give me strength to be who I was, recreate the ones whom I lost down the road - so hard and lonely - please forgive me now for who I am

I do agree to a point... no grudge's been left unchallenged as if I could disappoint a crowd around me... As each day of my life has been led by one declining nation And in the end - all I'd get's my final destination

As there's no escape and no redemption at any Sunday afternoon Your sins are catching up to hit you in the back you never thought they would until today...you're doomed while watching an open exit wound