Savatage, Morphine Child

There's a thief on a summer's night Across an ocean Who sees another's life fading away

And of this life he writes
Without emotion
Then pushes it from sight
Somewhere faraway
To a distant land
Every tear betrayed
And never makes
And never makes a stand
Makes a stand
Lord there's something wrong
Makes a stand

Could a star's forgotten light A child's devotion Embrace eternal night In shallow graves

As we watch from distant heights
No breath or motion
Still every ghost must haunt in its own way
Sleep beneath my dreams
Safe within my hands
Where I never under
Never under
Never understand

Lord there's something wrong

No one remembers No one denies No one asks questions No one replies

Here nothing enters Nothing departs Here nothing's ended If nothing starts

In your life could you carry on Could you never think about it Till in time you start to doubt it

Then you close your eyes Is it really gone How in truth can you defend her If you're really not remembering

No regrets
If you just forget
If a memory is lenient
You can find it most convenient
So you let it fade
Till it's very vague
Just a silhouette of shadows
But the shadows are still lingering

Still I hold you there With your endless stare

I'm too old to be living this Lived to long to be given this Can our god be forgiving this

I had a light that shined Across my mind Rarely see it any more

Now it is mostly dark Accept for sparks Can't remember what they're for

I am the morphine child The dream defiled The never ending metaphor I am the wizard oz Result and cause Never look behind that door

Cantations Cantations Cantations Cantations

Never listen to the crowd before me Never listen to the self ordained Never really wanted to believe it any way

Time is fading Night is calling I am on my way

Turn around turn around Turn around turn around

Time is fading Night is calling I am on my...
