Saxon, Are We Travellers In Time

[Byford/Quinn/Scarrattt/Carter]

Two thousand years they stand behind us Are we just travellers in time We face the phantoms of our future They face destruction of their kind

These, these are the days These, these are the times Are we just travellers in time

The ancient stones of time they call us To hear their mystic prophecies They've stood in silence they're immortal Forgotton page of history

These, these are the days These, these are the times Are we just travellers in time Are we just travellers in time

The crystal powers they will take you Far across the sands of time Searching ever for an answer What's the future of mankind

These, these are the days These, these are the times Are we just travellers in time In time, time, time, time, time
