The Carpenters, Now

(Roger Nichols / Dean Pitchford)

Now, Now when it rains I don't feel cold. Now that I have your hand to hold, The winds might blow through me but I don't care. There's no harm in thunder if you are there.

And now, now when we touch my feelings fly.

Now when I'm sailing I know why.

You light up my world like the morning sun.

You're so deep within me, we're almost one.

And now all the fears that I had start to fade.

I was always afraid love might forget me, love might let me down.

Then look what I found.

[instrumental solo]

The winds might blow through me but I don't care. There's no harm in thunder is you are there.

And now, now, now when I wake there's someone home. I'll never face the nights alone. You gave me the courage I need to win, to open my heart and to let you in. And I never really knew how, until now, until now.

No, I never really knew how,----until now.
