The Cure, The Empty World

As stiff as toys And tall as men And swaying like the wind torn trees She talked about the empty world With eyes like poisoned birds

She talked about the armies
That marched inside her head
And how they made her dreams go bad
But oh!
How happy she was!
How proud she was!
To be fighting in the war
In the empty world!