

Tiamat, Best Friend Money Can Buy

we drank as much as we could and she drank more than she should we stumbled out of this cheap whisky bar and that is the story so far guided by the dim streetlights we walked through the black harbour night no people, no passing car well, that is the story so far

"she thinks she smells the northland snow northland snow
and she's as glad as I to go ay, to go
her very bolts are sick for shore sick for shore
and I, I want it ten times more ten times more"

she silenced her mouth when i asked for her name and she asked me to please do the same she said "it's all written in the stars"

but she whispered her name when I kissed her goodbye her voice stained by whiskey and tar she went back to where she belonged and I, I went back to the bar

northland snow
ten times more"
