Timo Tolkki's Avalon, A World Without Us

A world without us

How is the world withou us? Is there a chance to adjust? Where is the beauty we all knew? Faded away to the dew

And in this end is there hope Is there a way for us to cope? With total destruction of all This is our final call

And so we run and so we hide Cause it's all done, most of us died

A world without us we're not learning A world without us not returning To the new horizons we will roam We will find at any cost The beauty that was lost So into the brave new world we go

Mankind is descends to the grave Because of the road we did pave There's nothing left for us to do The deeds are done, time to go

Still we run, still we hide And so we live, but most will die

A world without us we're not learning A world without us not returning To the new horizons we will roam We will find at any cost The beauty that was lost So into the brave new world we go
