Trance To The Sun, Leaves lady luck crossed her legs and crossed her eyes and she bared a barbed wire tongue when she said it wasn't fate tat brought us here?

she said it's fate that makes us run to a quiet light sky breathing pushing weight of night skies teasing

we came here hungry and dry

we came here to live and to die the quiet light sky is leaving weeping repeating

believing

deceiving

dripping with tar

blotting out the sun

dropping the stars

telling us were the ones coming to something new foreign dimensions were I will see you again and we will be new again yes I will see you again and we will be new again tomorrow will show its face tomorrow will shed its grace but now were leaving so far away

silent fragments of conversations with you in my head while I lay in my dirty bed this is my first confession, although you are no priest this is a painful lesson, a lesson in the least is this work of mysterious witches?

will you find me broken in muddy ditches?

will you find me in my chambers pressed against the wall?

fucking myself until it bleeds until I fall with this quiet light sky leaving

dripping with tar

blotting out the sun

dropping the stars telling us were the ones

coming to something new

quiet light sky is leaving pushing weight of night skies teasing

we came here hungry and dry

we came here to live and to die

the quiet light sky is leaving

weeping repeating believing deceiving

pushing weight of night skies teasing