Dialysis, your blood cycling through kits
It's amazing you're alive, no one else could have survived
The trauma you've seen is too horrific to describe
Ingest this medication & everything we prescribe
Inject this syringe deep into your arm
Prepare the veins to contract back to your heart
From a great height we can see the damage done
The needle pierces through to remove dead tissue
We can rebuild you if insurance covers it all
You'll be brand new again, just not you

My teenager break your lonely heart
You'll never need to face the truth alone
My teenage with faded broken eyes
I'll set you free, I will forfeit it all

In drug induced dreams you find lucid sight
In the the darkness you lay awake afraid on the daylight
The world you've known is rubble in the sandbox
Machines push and pull and you climb from the rocks
No significant change occurs to make your life stronger
Teeth clinch as you see the light of the harbinger
Friends and foes assemble to send you along
It's not a tunnel, it's a temple, this transaction was written wrong

My teenager break your lonely heart
You'll never need to face the truth alone
My teenage with faded broken eyes
I'll set you free, I will forfeit it all
